12th Sunday in Ordinary Times

June 19, 2016

Luke 9:18-24

Luke gives us his unique version of the conversation that followed after Jesus asked his disciples who they thought he was. For Luke, the incident began in the context of Jesus' prayer. Like Matthew and Mark, Luke records the mistaken identity possibilities; Jesus might be Elijah, another prophet, or a resuscitated John the Baptist. Those ideas introduce the people's context for understanding him. There was considerable confusion about Jesus and John and over which was the more prominent. (Remember how Luke's infancy narrative introduces the two: Jesus outshines John in every detail.) Calling him a prophet put Jesus in a general category. The idea that he might be Elijah evoked specific expectations of the beginning of the messianic era. The public seemed to conclude that God was acting through Jesus in much the way God had dealt with their ancestors. It was a good though incomplete answer.

We then discover that Peter's declaration that he was the Christ was a better but more dangerous reply. Luke doesn't mention the argument between Peter and Jesus (the "Get behind me Satan" of Mark 8:33) but he sums it up saying that Jesus "rebuked" them all forbidding them to repeat the idea to anyone. While Jesus didn't deny any of the title they gave him, he refused to allow them to explain him through their messianic theology. According to the Gospel of Luke, never in his earthly life did Jesus refer to himself as the Christ: it was only on the road to Emmaus that he said "the Christ had to suffer." At this point, rather than affirm his character as God's anointed. Jesus calls himself "the Son of Man," the prototype human who, because he remains true to God, will suffer greatly.

This reading feels like a return to Holy Week. It reminds us that messiahship is not all it was cracked up to be. Jesus did not deny his messianic role. but he let the disciples know that they had a misguided conception of it. They were ready, even eager, to understand Jesus through the lens of their expectations. His answer was that only way to understand him was to follow him through the daily suffering and rejections that inevitably result as they became more faithful to his example than to their plans.

This Gospel challenges us to stand with the disciples as Jesus ask his question. If we do so, we'll discover that, as always, Jesus draws us into the unexpected. What seems like a simple question about him takes an unanticipated turn and becomes a question about us. We may answer like "the people" that Jesus was a prophet. And then honor his memory. We might say he was an important historical figure and thus admire him. But if we dare to say with Peter, "You are the Christ of God," we become implicated.

If we say he is the Christ, we declare that we will follow or be damned. Not that he will condemn us, but if we refuse to follow, we will lose our life in chasing our own expectations instead of receiving what God offers by clothing us in Christ. Following his path, we become heirs with him, receiving more than we can possibly imagine.

Please note that "Prayers for the Sick" will be announced from the altar for 4 weeks. Then the names will be in the bulletin for another 4 weeks. Please inform the Rectory if you wish to add a loved one for prayers, or to have

Social Ministry Happenings

June 19, 2016

“ When the demands of life seem unfair to you, when you are exhausted and have to pull yourself out of bed yet another time to do some act of service, do it gladly, without counting the cost and without self-pity. If your persevere in serving others, in giving yourself to the poor, if you persevere to the point of completely spending yourself , perhaps someday the poor will find it in their hearts to forgive you. For it is more blessed to give than to receive and it is also a lot easier!” St. Vincent dePaul
